Every animal in a Hollywood film is well trained. It is not difficult to train a horse or a dog. But have you ever heard of trained ravens? Not just one or two, but nearly a hundred of them? Even this was made possible in Hollywood when the creator of some of the best suspense films in the history of cinema, Alfred Hitchcock, decided to make a film called 'Birds.' In the story the birds from all over the world start attacking humans. Hitchcock needed a variety of birds, but what was required in the largest number was ravens. Notices were placed in the press all over the United States, asking people to contact the filmmaker if they knew how to get hold of trained ravens.

O father and mother if buds are nipped,
And blossoms blown away;
And if the tender plants are stripped
Of their joy in the springing day,
By sorrow and care's dismay, -

How shall the summer arise in joy,
Or the summer fruits appear?
Or how shall we gather what griefs destroy,
Or bless the mellowing year,
When the blasts of winter appear?

But all the time
I've been a-climbin' on,
And reachin' landin's,
And turnin' corners,
And sometimes goin' in the dark
Where there ain't been no light.
So, boy, don't you turn back.
Don't you set down on the steps.
'Cause you finds it's kinder hard.
Don't you fall now—
For I've still goin', honey,
I've still climbin',
And life for me ain't been no crystal stair.

People and whales have shared a long history, with a relationship that has changed dramatically over time. Whales have been hunted professionally by whalers for their meat and blubber (that is, oil) from about a thousand years ago. Whale oil was precious and widely used to light lamps until 1860 when kerosene became the primary fuel for lamps. The scale of whale hunting that went on until that can be guessed from the fact that in the mid-1800s more than nine hundred whaling ships were sent out to sea, mainly from American ports, with an average voyage length of three or four years. As everyone knows, whales are very large creatures. Sperm whales, once described as leviathans, are truly gigantic in size. They possess the large teeth among whales and live to be more than sixty years old. They can dive deeper than any other animal (about 3 kilometers) in order to catch deep-sea squid, their favourite food.
