11	The poet Bob Dylan begins his poem asking some simple questions. The first is related to the hard ships and pains that a man undertakes before he attains the stage of being mature to be called a an man. The inference here is that mankind must cross the roads of troubles and endurances to become a citizen of civilized society. By the second question the poet asks about the steps to be taken to maintain peace and harmony on earth. The poet knows that it is not an essay task. That is why he is doubting how many times should white doves be flown n the air . By the third question the poet establishes his strong will to stop all wars forever. The poet himself gives the answer for the above three questions by saying that” It is blowing in the wind”. Here the poet is insisting every man that it is his duty to grab the way of keeping peace and harmony in the world. The poem is very much attractive as it is very crisp and very beautiful.	5
