11	'Blowing in the Wind" is a beautiful poem written by Bob Dylan. The poem contains so many images which are brought out by beautiful symbolic images. It is again in the form of the poet asking questions. The readers are expected to find the answers of such questions themselves. But of course at the end of every stanza the poet himself gives the answer. The poet says that a person must suffer a lot before becoming a man. He also says that so many efforts must be taken before mankind can establish peace on earth. All these are done by him symbolically. For example walking of a man through so many roads shows the long, patient efforts a man should take up. So also peace cannot be maintained without strain. The poet is sure that everything will cease to exist once. But it takes its own course of time. This is the law of Nature. No man can pretend not to see all these happen. The poet is optimistic in saying that the answer to all these questions is in the wind. In the wind means the answer already exists in his own reach and it is his duty to realise it. The symbolic expression of images are very successfully shown in the poem. Some metaphors are also used very effectively. They are the white dove and cannon balls. White dove stands for peace and cannon balls stands for war. The main device used for establishing the poet's idea is of asking questions and lead the readers to get the answer themselves. The style of free verse also used.	5
