Assignment

- Explain the role of education and healthcare in human resource development.

Ans) Improving the skills of individuals through education and healthcare is called human resource development. In our country, education is provided through schools, colleges, universities and technical educational institutions. Our country has made a fundamental right and has passed the Act in 2009. The RTE Act ensures elementary education to everyone.

Several projects have been implemented in our country to develop education and skills.

e.g. Integrated Child Development (ICDS), Sarva Shiksha Abhiyan (SSA), Rashtriya Uchchal Shiksha Abhiyan (RUSA), National Skill Development and Monetary Reward Scheme.

By ensuring better opportunities for education and healthcare the potential and skills of human beings can be developed. When natural resource and human resources join together, there will be greater production, followed by economic efficiency in the country. Healthy persons can ensure the progress of the country. Good healthcare ensures longevity. Therefore, planned efforts are required in the education and health sectors to develop human resource. Only then can the quality and development of human resource be improved.
