1) Complete the conversation between Mr. John and A.J. Cronin.

Ans) John : You still don't remember me, do you ?

Cronin : Sorry, I don't remember.

John : You saved a man's life 25 years ago.

Cronin : Oh! I do remember it now. Aren't you Mr John ?

John : Yes sir, I'm John and this is my wife.

Cronin : What are you doing now ?

John : I'm a social worker. I help the delinquent adolescents to come back to life.

Cronin : Good. Helping others makes one's life meaningful.

John : If you hadn't saved me, I would not have become a social worker.

Cronin : That's my duty.

John : Do you still live in London.

Cronin : Yes, I still live in London.

2) Prepare the narration of doctor.

Ans) I was returning from New York. I met a couple on the deck, one Mr. John and his wife. He tried to introduce himself, but I couldn't recognise him. He produced his visiting card. Even then I couldn't identify him.

Then the man began to tell his story. In his younger days he was working as a clerk in a solicitor's office in London. Utterly friendless, he fell into bad companies and wasted all his earnings in gambling. He stole an amount from the office table and lost it too in gambling. He got terribly desperate and tried to commit suicide. The landlady informed the police. The police sergeant sought my help. After one and a half hours strenuous effort we could bring him back to life. When I heard his story everything became clear to me. The man said that he bade farewell to all his bad habits. At present he is working as the director of a charitable organisation dedicated to the care of maladjusted and delinquent youth.
