(Hints: The boy sits on top of Banyan Tree- a huge black cobra glide out- a mongoose emerges from the bushes- a battle of champions- a myna and a jungle crow arrives- intervenes in the fight- the crow dies- the final result of the fight)

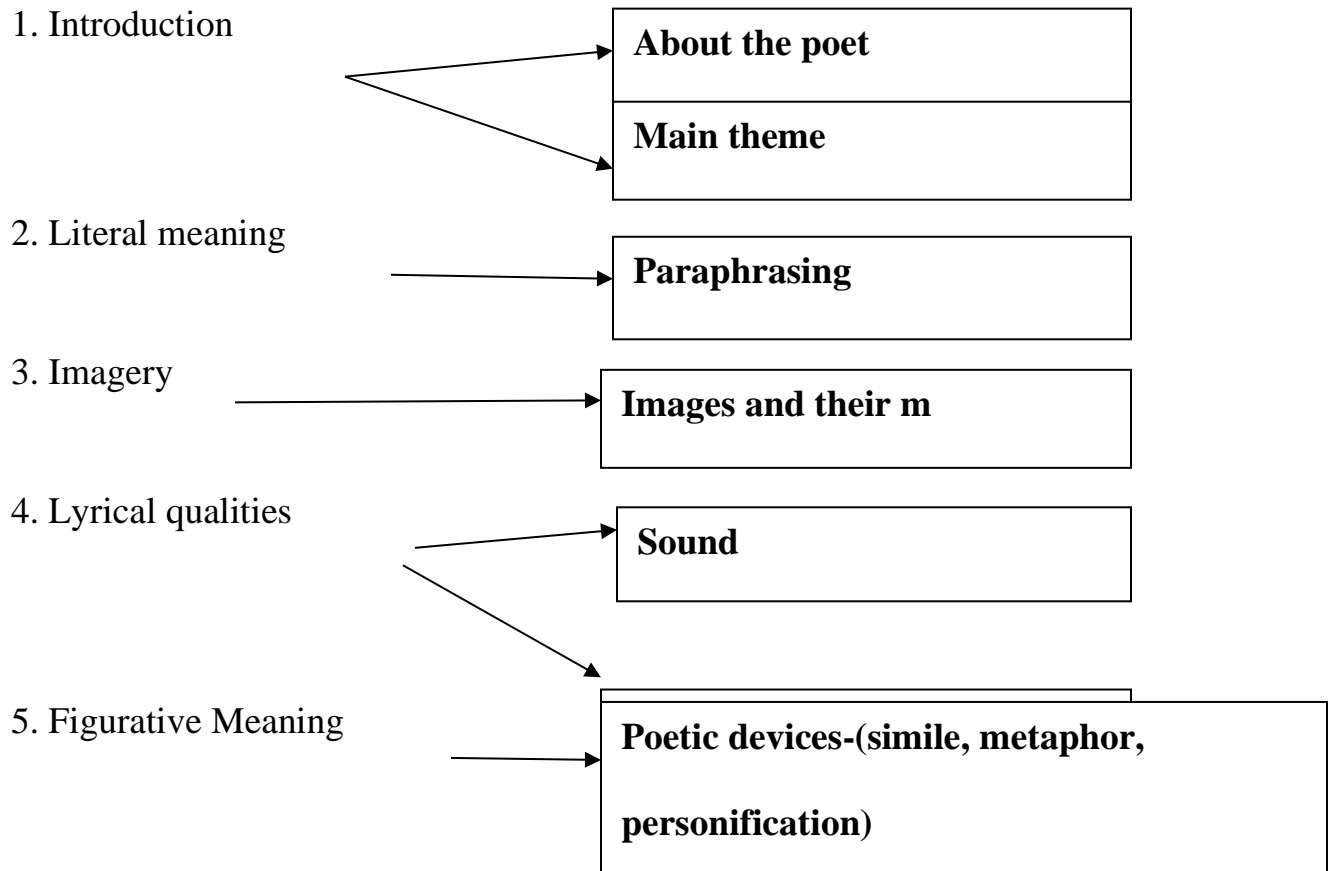

The boy was sitting on the platform half up the tree. It was an April afternoon. When he looked out, he saw a huge cobra gliding out of a clump of a cactus. At the same time a grey mongoose came out from the bushes. They were superb fighters. They came face to face beneath the tree. They were unaware of the presence of the boy. The boy was looking down through the leaves. He could see the two ferocious animals. It was an incredible experience. There were two spectators, myna and crow to witness the fight. They were sitting to know the result of the fight.

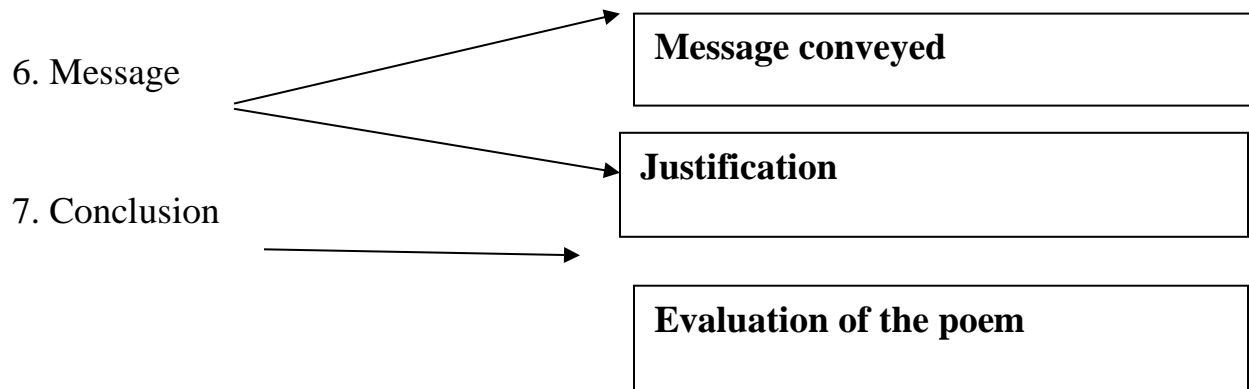

The cobra was a strong fighter. The cobra proved that he was clever. The mongoose was faster and quicker in motion than the cobra. The mongoose opened the attack. The cobra hissed and darted his forked tongue in and out. It spread its spectacled hood to frighten the mongoose. The mongoose with its long thick hair and bushy tail faced the cobra. The long hair on his spine stood up. The cobra stood on the defensive way and swayed slowly from side to side and tried to mesmerize the mongoose to make a false move. However the mongoose was well aware of the power of its opponent. He fixed his gaze at a point below the cobra's hood and started on his back. The cobra struck back and but missed the aim. The mongoose darted very swiftly and bit the cobra. By this time the cobra became tired and weak. The mongoose walked to it fearlessly and caught it by the snout. The cobra writhed in pain and coiled around the mongoose. The cobra ceased struggling. Then the mongoose gripped it round the hood and dragged into the bushes. Finally the mongoose won the fight. Grandpa was pleased with the result. The myna came and gave a shrill cry of congratulation and flew away.

APPRECIATION OF A POEM

'Lines Written in Early Spring' is a beautiful poem written by world renowned romantic poet William words worth. He vividly describes the beauty of nature and discusses the concerns of human activities on nature. He was fascinated by the beautiful sights and sounds of nature. The poet sits in a small woodland grove and listens to the chirping of the birds around him. He sits in a relaxed mood against a tree in a shady clump of trees. He was much pleased in the songs and music of woods. Even though he is happy, some sad thoughts came to his mind, which washes away the mirth and joy from his mind. Nature has linked her soul to the souls of human beings. He contemplates the changes that society has undergone around him.

The poet was glad to see the primrose and the periwinkle co-exist peacefully and seem to derive pleasure and enthusiasm from their living. He strongly believes that every flower enjoys the air it breathes. The birds around him express the thrill of pleasure by hopping and playing in the grove. He feels that the birds and flowers are very happy in nature. He wonders why man has moved away from Nature
