APPRECIATION OF THE POEM

The poem 'The Ballad of Father Gilligan' was written by W.B. Yeats. It is a ballad. It tells the story of a hard working priest and about his parishioners. Father Gilligan was a tired out of his priestly obligations during an epidemic in his parish. His parishioners were bed ridden or dead or buried. He was worried about his parishioners. He complained that he had no rest, nor joy, nor peace. Realizing his fault, he sought forgiveness from God. He justifies that himself that his mind was willing but his mind was weak. He was eager to reach the house of the sick man. Realizing his mistake the priest rode recklessly to the house of the sick man. He thought that he died without receiving the last sacrament. But his wife told him that the man died happily after the departure of priest. The poem is rich with beautiful images and poetic devices.
