Dr. Rahim was a native of Kerala and was working in a private clinic in Chennai. He was unmarried and only just started his practice. He was staying alone in an old rented house. Last night while he was preparing to go to bed, he had heard a sound of something falling down. He didn't take it serious as he thought it might be created by rats. While he was sitting on a chair, a cobra landed on his shoulder and coiled on his left arm. He was very much frightened and in his frantic efforts to escape from the snake, it bit him. Soon it moved toward the mirror on his table. Immediately he got out and ran to his friends. He explained everything to them, and they took him to the city hospital. But unfortunately, his life could not be saved.

In the village lives a sixty-five year old grandfather with his wife and a grandson. He has an English model garden and in it a huge and old banyan tree. The tree is as old as the Dehra town.
