Land of Misery

– Anonymous

On the eastern shore, she knocked on our door

Then drifted away to the west

She then turned north, and steadily forth

With rage upon her crest

As she gathered force, On a steady course

To a land below the sea

Too unaware, or unprepared

For such a tragedy

Toppling of homes, the shredding of domes of a wind that relentlessly blow

Score

All the terrain, was flooded with rain

When the lake did overflow

And then she passed, and none to fast

This city beneath the sea

Leaving this flood, which carries our blood

Through a land of misery
