SEEN PASSAGE

Rip Van Winkle was a good natured but lazy man. He was a kind neighbour. Children liked him because he played with them.

The only problem was that he used to shirk. His cows were going astray and weeds grew in his farm but he did not care. To avoid work, he would walk away into the forest with his constant companion, his dog, named Wolf.

One day, as he was roaming in the forest, he met few strange old men who were short in height. Though they were playing ninepins game, their faces were serious and there was silence. One of the short old men offered him a drink from a barrel. Rip Van Winkle drank it and slept for twenty years.

When he woke up and returned to his village, everyone looked at him with wonder. An old lady identified her kind neighbor and exclaimed, "It is Rip Van Winkle! Welcome home again."

UNSEEN PASSAGE

Once upon a time, a small grey mouse and a big black cat lived in a large grey house.

One day, the small grey mouse went softly into the kitchen to see if he could get something to eat. Suddenly, he met the big black cat.

“Oh”, cried the cat, “this is lucky! Now I shall eat a good dinner.”

The mouse saw that he was caught, so he said in a most polite manner, “Thank you, Mr. Cat, but if I am to come to your house for dinner, I should like to first put my red Sunday Coat. My old grey shirt is not nice enough”

The cat has never seen the mouse wearing his red Sunday coat. “Maybe he will taste better”, he thought, “Ok! Come soon then, I am hungry. I will wait for you here.”

The small grey mouse immediately ran into his hole. Mr. Cat waited all the day. He sang to himself, thinking about the good dinner he would have. But the small grey mouse never came back.

Since then, this is what people say in Catland: "A mouse in an old grey shirt is sweeter than a mouse in a red Sunday coat."
