44. Write a summary or Make Notes of the following passage:

My memories of the first time I saw Kung Fu Panda in 2008, as a schoolgoer, is of being stunned by its deeply felt understanding of human emotions and the humor that caught you unawares. The story of an ordinary panda dreaming to fight evil alongside the luminaries of martial arts not only showed many children like me the power to dream, but also made a larger point, which in hindsight, assumes great significance; a good story sustains itself. Only later I would realize the importance, even need, for the most appropriate medium to execute the vision of a great story. It is in this context animation becomes all-encompassing in its power to move hearts and engage with the larger questions of the day. For Kung Fu Panda's director, Mark Osborne, however, it was the release of Spider Man : Into the Spider-verse 10 years later that marked an iconic moment for animation.
