43. Radhakrishnan could not afford further studies at Oxford University as many of his professors suggested. He had to start earning to supplement the meagre income of his family. Even during his stay in college, he gave tuition to students to support himself financially. At no stage did he let his own poverty come in the way of his achievement. He always upheld the view that it did not matter whether you were rich or poor. Immediately after taking his M.A. degree, which he did with distinction, Radhakrishnan started his teaching career in 1909 as an Assistant Lecturer at the Madras Presidency College. One of his students at that time has recorded that in those days one could see the fair-complexioned, tall, slim, bespectacled figure of Radhakrishnan with a big head, a broad forehead, an aquiline nose, a keen yet serene face, a pair of eyes that showed no fret or wavering, wearing a long white coat, a white turban and a dhoti, moving with a shy and yet brisk gait in the corridors of the college. Most of the students hardly noticed him. But those who attended his classes were highly impressed by his deep knowledge of philosophy, his phenomenal memory, his capacity for expounding even the most abstract and abstruse philosophical doctrines in simple terms, intelligible to all the students, and by the impressive and eloquent way, in which he lectured. His students admired the young teacher as they admired none else. He never spoke a harsh word, but maintained the strictest discipline in class.
