35. As a young girl, Kalpana would sleep in the front yard of her house during summer, looking at the spangled skies and wishing she had a telescope. At school, in her drawing class, while others drew houses and plants, Kalpana would fill her pages with different designs of planes and stars. Unlike other girls of her age, she never bothered about home tuition, marks or rank. However, she was very much interested in dancing, music and karate, and learnt them fairly well. She was unique in many ways. "I'm not just another girl," she would often tell her brother Sanjay. "I'm going to be better than boys."

As Kalpana grew up, she came to know of JRD Tata who had done some of the first mail flights in India. She also saw the airplanes that he flew hanging in one of the aerodromes. Seeing these airplanes she came to know of what this great man had done during those years. She always held him in high esteem.
